Rainless Skies Bring Hope For Levees Still Standing On River Below St. Louis

Congress Asked For Flood Funds

St. Louis, July 3 (U.P.)—Rainless skies brought hope today that water-soaked levees still standing would hold against an expected all-time record flood crest below St. Louis, where other dikes have crumbled.

But midwestern flood damage already stood at hundreds of millions of dollars and governors and representatives of 10 Missouri basin states called upon Congress to do something about it.

Meeting at Omaha, they demanded that an economy-minded Congress provide "ample funds" to avert such flood disasters in the future.

For 40 days and 40 nights the Mississippi and its tributaries have pounded and smashed their levees and surged over towns and farms in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Illinois and Kansas.

Brig. Gen. Lewis E. Pick, head of the Missouri river division of the Corps of Engineers, told the governors yesterday that Missouri river basin floods had caused 25 lives, causing $11,000,000 in damage to farm crops and property and ravaged 3,000,000 acres.

The Red Cross said today its latest check showed 16 persons killed, 232 injured and 34,812 homeless as a result of flood waters in four states. Red Cross spokesmen reported 20,300 homeless in Iowa, 2,972 in Illinois, 10,940 in Missouri and 600 in Nebraska. They estimated that another 45,000 persons had been affected by the floods, since rain-swollen streams began overflowing late in May.

In the four states 4,190 homes were damaged, 47 completely destroyed, and 7,524 other buildings were damaged, the Red Cross reported.

The Mississippi crested at St. Louis yesterday and rolled toward two Missouri towns, where levee workers fought to hold back waters expected to be the highest on record there.

U. S. engineers moved their forces into Perry County, Mo., to bolster dikes protecting Clayville and McBride across the river from Chester. They said they believe the levees would hold, provided there was no more rain.

Great Britain And France Ask Help In Recovery Plan

Paris, July 3 (U.P.)—Great Britain and France appealed today to all European countries except Spain to join them in drafting a joint European recovery program.

They acted in defiance of Soviet Foreign Minister C. M. Molotov who made a pre-dawn departure from Paris by plane without farewells or formality.

Only Spain was excluded from the Anglo-French invitation, but Russia was certain to reject it.

A joint communiqué was issued by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Foreign Minister Georges Bidault after a two-hour conference.

It invited all European countries "to draw up a program for European reconstruction in which the resources and needs of each country will be coordinated in a way in which each European country may freely decide."

Issuance of the invitation completed the full break between the East and West symbolized by Molotov's pre-dawn departure.

Gas Station Owner Is Shot By Negro

Springfield, Tenn., July 3 (U.P.)—Jake Barber, a filling station owner, was shot in the neck yesterday by a Negro who bought gasoline from him.

Barber said the unidentified Negro told him he was on his way from Columbia, Tenn., to Kentucky. After he bought gas he pulled a gun and tried to force the white man into the auto with another Negro. Barber was shot in the scuffle and the Negro fled.

Two Big CIO Unions Vote to Boycott NLRB And Ignore No Strike Clause

New York, July 3 (U.P.)—Two of the CIO's biggest unions, the United Electrical Workers and the United Steelworkers, threatened today to boycott the new National Labor Relations Board created by the Taft-Hartley labor law.

The executive boards of the two unions, which have a combined membership of more than 1,000,000 workers, voted to ignore the new labor board and the steelworkers said they would not agree to "no strike" clauses in future contracts.

In addition, the executive board of the U.S.W. resolved not to "comply with the unconstitutional limitations of political activity which are written into the Taft-Hartley bill." A meeting of the CIO-PAC board will be held soon to determine future action, the board said.

The decisions of the unions not to submit any issues to the NLRB, including requests for collective bargaining elections, was the first action in organized labor's avowed campaign to fight the Taft-Hartley law.

They were assured the support of Sen. Robert F. Wagner, D., N. Y., author of the Wagner labor relations law. Wagner said in a message to President Truman he expected to help lead in the fight to repeal, or modify the law.

"It was forced to see the work of a lifetime destroyed while I was at home," Wagner's message said.

The 23-member executive board of the U.S.E. said it would be the policy of the electrical workers to submit no issue to the new labor board, "nor in any other manner, upon union initiative, to step among the snares and pitfalls that the NAM authors of the law have spread for labor's feet."

"The Taft-Hartley act was written to make the board an instrument for disrupting, spying upon and meddling in the affairs of unions that may come before it," the board said. "Nothing but injury can result to the interests of the membership of any union that takes a seat in this crooked game, where the rules are rigged and the dice are loaded against them."

The U.S.W. decision was announced in Pittsburgh by Secretary-Treasurer David A. McDonald. It said the steelworkers would respect the letter no strike pledges in present contracts.

The executive board also resolved to settle all issues through collective bargaining and other peaceful means, but added, "the right to strike in the event of dispute must be preserved or our freedom will be lost."

The union leaders said the new law created too many requirements for the holding of collective bargaining elections and too many new opportunities for use of the election machinery as an "obstruction rather than an aid" to collective bargaining.

The board's resolution against no strike clauses in future contracts was passed, it said, to protect the union against "harassing lawsuits" which might be pressed as the result of wildcat strikes.

McDonald said courts, independent agencies and others may be called upon to replace collective bargaining machinery of the labor board. Employers also may be asked to negotiate contracts on the basis of proof submitted by the union that it represents a majority of employees, McDonald said.

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, said "there is nothing in the

Breds Shutout Ordway 6-0; Vets Top Independents 8-5

Richard Farrell continued his domination of league pitching honors last night as he turned in a two-hitter to gain a 6-0 victory for the Murray Breds over Ordway Hall. Sporting a record of three wins against one loss, the Bred hurler has turned in 28 innings with one walk.

Wyatt, doing the mound duty for Ordway, gave up six hits and walked two Breds. Wyatt fanned five Vets while Farrell whiffed two. The game was the second shutout of the season, the Breds having turned back Ordway 5-0 in the league curtain-raiser on June 12.

Hobart, Bred hitter, connected for a triple off Wyatt and Witt slammed a double off the losing pitcher, J. Taylor, Ordway shortstop, collected a double off Farrell for one of Ordway's two hits.

In the second game, Solomon pitched the College Vets to a 8-5 victory over the Independents. Solomon walked one, gave up 10 hits and fanned four in running his team out string to 22. Solomon has won three and is credited with no losses.

West, Ordway pitcher, struck out four, Walked four and allowed nine hits. Coil, Vet third baseman, connected for two 2-base bingles in driving in two runs and Crowell, Vets, and Perdue, Vets, also chalked up two baggers.

Unidentified Plane 'Bombs' Maryland Fishing Village

Wittman, Md., July 3 (U.P.)—Preliminary investigation showed today that a faulty bomb shackle of a still unidentified plane may have been responsible for the dropping of two small bombs on this fishing village yesterday.

The bombs wrecked a boatyard and injured the owner and his son.

Police reported finding a bomb fragment to which a broken piece of a bomb shackle was attached. The shackle is used to fasten the bombs under the plane's fuselage, and police theorized that it broke and freed the missiles.

Experts from the Army's Aberdeen, Md., proving ground were to examine the bomb fragment and the shackle in an effort to determine whether the plane was Army, Navy or civilian.

In Washington, an Army Air Forces spokesman said he did not believe the single-engine plane described by Wittman residents belonged to the Army. He said there was no practice bombing being held between New York and Richmond, Va., and added that the AAF no longer has any "live" bombs in the area.

The Navy's Patuxent River air base said it had "live" bombs, but none of its planes was in the air at the time the "bombing" occurred.

The bombs weighed between 50 and 100 pounds each and were said by police to have been loaded with low-powered test charges of the type used on bombing range. Target practice bombs carry only enough powder to cause a small explosion so pilots will know when they hit a target.

Eyewitness reports of the plane were confusing. Some spectators told police it was "flying too high to identify." Others said it was "reasonably low." Some said the plane was a dark color, while others recalled that it was silver.

One of the bombs struck a boatyard owned by J. Walter Jones, up-warding a cement foundation and demolishing one craft. He was building, Jones and his son, Edwin, were knocked unconscious by flying debris, but neither was seriously injured.

The second bomb fell in an open field and did no damage.

Miners In Appalachian Coal Field Are Expected To Return After Vacation

Washington, July 3 (U.P.)—About half of the nation's soft-coal industry was still confronted today with the threat of an indefinite strike.

The other half—consisting of northern Appalachian producers and the "captives" mines of steel companies—was virtually assured that production would resume when John L. Lewis' soft coal miners end their 10 day vacation next Tuesday. Only those producers were involved in the "tentative" wage contract which Lewis accepted yesterday. Spokesmen for the others doubted they could reach separate agreements before Tuesday but were hopeful that any resulting strike would be short.

Lewis called the policy committee of his United Mine Workers (AFL) to a meeting here Saturday to ratify the agreement with northern producers. The individual companies must also approve the agreement which their agents worked out in secret sessions with Lewis.

The terms were not officially announced but informed sources said they assured the miners of what amounts to a 35 cents an hour pay increase.

Truman To Deliver July Fourth Speech At Charlottesville

Washington, July 3 (U.P.)—President Truman leaves the capital at 2 p.m. EDT today for a four-day trip to Charlottesville, Va., where he will deliver a Fourth of July address.

The President will speak from the porch of Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson. His 20-minute address will be carried by all the major networks beginning at 1:30 p.m. EDT, tomorrow.

Mr. Truman was to travel by automobile to Charlottesville, accompanied by his aides and by 46 reporters, photographers and radio technicians—the largest group ever to go with him on a trip. He will return to the White House on Sunday.

Originally he had planned to return to Washington Saturday, but he decided to spend the weekend at the home of Stanley Woodward. The Woodward home is about one mile from Monticello.

In addition to the speech, the only engagement on the President's schedule is a luncheon at the Colonnade Club on the University of Virginia campus.

Farm Visit Is Fatal For 5 Year Old Girl

Atlanta, Ga., July 3 (U.P.)—Five year old Cora Jane Crowley left the big city for her first vacation on a Georgia farm to see the cows, pigs and the chickens. She was sent away while her mother gave birth to a baby boy three days ago.

Today Mrs. Crowley buried her child in her pillow in the hospital maternity ward. Her curly-haired Cora died of severe burns in a nearby room.

The youngster, enjoying her new farm life on the pasture, approached a workshed. A blazing can of gasoline landed in her path and exploded.

A workman had tossed the can from the window unaware of Cora's approach. The can had caught fire from sparks flying from the sharpening of a plow on a grindstone.

Senate's Urgent Legislation Cools On The Shelf As Texas Senators Squabble

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 3 (U.P.)—A Senate bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, which would require the Food and Drug Administration to issue orders to remove from the market any food, drug, or cosmetic found to be adulterated or misbranded, has been held up by a squabble between Texas Senators.

Senator James H. Eastland, D-Miss., and Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, D-Texas, are the two Texas Senators who are holding up the bill. Eastland is the chairman of the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, and Johnson is the chairman of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

The bill, which was introduced by Senator Charles McNary, D-Ind., and Senator Charles McNary, D-Ind., has been passed by the House of Representatives. It now awaits action by the Senate.

The bill is part of a larger bill, the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, which was passed by the House of Representatives in 1938. It has been amended several times since then.

Conciliation Panel Continues To Seek Strike Settlement

New York, July 2 (U.P.)—Federal conciliators continued their search today for a pattern for settlement of the spreading shipyard strike in which an estimated 90,000 workers were idle.

A three-man conciliation panel scheduled a meeting at 11 a.m. with officials of both the industrial union of marine and shipyard workers (CIO) and the Bethlehem Steel Co., at whose nine yards 40,000 workers were on strike.

A settlement by the union and Bethlehem might set the pattern for the settlement of the dispute at other Atlantic Gulf Coast and Great Lakes yards, the conciliators said.

The panel held "exploratory" talks with company and union officials yesterday.

H. Ross Colwell, regional director of the Federal Conciliation Service, headed the panel, which also included William N. Margolis, assistant regional director, and Commissioner Thomas G. Dougherty.

National President John Green represented the union in the talks, and J. M. Larkin, vice president in charge of industrial and public relations, represented Bethlehem.

The union asked for a 10 percent wage raise, improved working conditions, six paid holidays a year and three week vacations after 20 years' employment. The shipbuilders contended that shipbuilding costs already were so high that the industry was at a disadvantage with foreign competition.

Negotiations still were in progress in some yards, and the workers had not been called out on strike.

Nothing doing, retorted the other Texas Senator, Tom Connally, one of Pappas' political enemies. Sen. Connally, the white hair, the southern accent and the eyeglasses on the black ribbon, said, "Doolley was a man of high repute and an excellent character."

On the second day of the argument, Pappas showed up in a hand-drawn suit, a spotted necktie, two-tone shoes, and a rubber band in his hair.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

AS JEFF waited in the ante-room of Dr. Grosbeck's office, he looked about him. The long wall opposite him was lined with glass cases containing small stuffed birds and animals, preserved so expertly that they almost seemed alive. Along the other walls were shelves of books.

At one side of the room, was a large table covered with a white cloth. In the center of it, crouching in the sunlight, was an amazingly lifelike black Belgian hare.

So it was alive! It leaped to the floor and, with a series of "Good morning" into the hall, Jeff scrutinized the other animals, half expecting them to follow suit.

Just then, Miss Gibson returned, looking somewhat embarrassed. "I was mistaken," she said. "The doctor will see you now."

Hugo Grosbeck's consultation room, like the ante-room, was furnished with shelves of books, but the wild life was limited to a small desk ornament—a tiny stuffed owl with upraised wings and fierce yellow eyes.

Dr. Grosbeck was as Myra had described him—slight, balding, with small piercing eyes behind gleaming nose glasses. He wore a well-tailored morning coat. Jeff supposed that striped trousers went with it, but he couldn't tell because the psychiatrist was almost eclipsed by the massive mahogany desk behind which he sat.

"Ah, good morning," the doctor said, speaking with a slight accent. "Please have a chair."

"I'm Robert Simpson," Jeff replied. "I'm Robert Simpson." He was determined to establish his alibi before it tripped him.

"Did you wish to see me professionally?"

"Yes, I did. About these dreams I've been having."

Dr. Grosbeck held up a hand. "Before you go into your difficulty, tell me what you think of psychiatrists?"

"I've had little experience with them," Jeff stammered, "but I understand there are several schools of thought."

"Not only several schools of thought, but each of us has his own methods of treatment," said the doctor. "Now Freud believed that psychic phenomena were explained by repressions in the subconscious mind seeking an outlet."

Jeff tried to keep his attention on the man opposite him, but he found that the yellow eyes of the stuffed owl had a peculiarly distracting effect.

The doctor noticed it. "Does my little bird bother you?" He turned the owl's eyes away from Jeff. "This is a specimen of elf-owl I captured in the Kofa Mountains of Arizona. Tardigrady is a keen interest of mine."

"I was admiring your exhibit in the ante-room," Jeff smiled. "The Belgian hare had me fooled. I thought at first that it, too, was stuffed."

Dr. Grosbeck frowned. "Satan is not supposed to be in there—he upsets the patients. Miss Gibson is new and she hasn't yet learned my wishes."

Across the desk, Jeff stared at a morning newspaper folded carefully at the editorial page.

"I see you've been reading Davidson's column," he said slowly. "Ah, yes, I am a great follower of his writings."

"Do you know him personally?"

"No—unfortunately, I would have liked to converse with this most interesting young man, but now it is too late."

Jeff tipped the arms of his chair. "Too late?"

"Yes—he seems to be swinging to the left and I am a conservative. I'm afraid any conversation we might have now would be an argument."

"Oh," Jeff relaxed.

His wife was touching his hand again, but he didn't seem to notice. "I wish," he said, "that I could have liked to converse with this most interesting young man, but now it is too late."

Jeff tipped the arms of his chair. "Too late?"

The small keen eyes were studying him. "You seem to be under some tension, Mr. Simpson."

"I am—that's why I came."

"Before you tell me about it," Dr. Grosbeck said, "would you please remove your dark glasses?"

Jeff took off the glasses. "Now, tell me about yourself," the doctor said softly.

"It's these dreams. . . . You see, I was an aviator in the war. I cracked up in flames and I fell, I kept reliving the experience in my sleep."

Jeff described his crash, but was careful to change the locale from China to France. When he had finished, Dr. Grosbeck smiled faintly. "You're a very common neurosis, Mr. Simpson."

"Is that good?"

"It means that it's more easily cured," Dr. Grosbeck leaned forward. "Are you afraid of dying, Mr. Simpson?"

"I'm not afraid of dying, Mr. Simpson."

"The will is the will to live, and its eternal enemy is death."

"Oh, well, I don't think I'm afraid of dying—that is, the actuality of it. It's just that it's so final."

The psychiatrist nodded sagely. "That's the way most of us feel without realizing it. It's the ignominy of death that frightens us—a terrible shock to our egos to think that everything can move along just as well without us. Tell me, why haven't you gone to a veterinarian's hospital for treatment?"

"I've been to a veterinarian's hospital for treatment," Jeff said. "I've been to a veterinarian's hospital for treatment."

"I've been to a veterinarian's hospital for treatment," Jeff said. "I've been to a veterinarian's hospital for treatment."

"I've been to a veterinarian's hospital for treatment," Jeff said. "I've been to a veterinarian's hospital for treatment."

Country Cure Urged For Bowery Drunks

NEW YORK (U.P.)—Drunkards will be banished from the Bowery if the East Side Chamber of Commerce has its way.

Mayor William O'Dwyer is studying a proposal the chamber made that a commission be named to consider sending Bowery alcoholics to a state farm county until they are cured "or almost cured."

The state colony or farm has not been established, but the chamber said that if it should be created and the alcoholics sent there, the action "would materially reduce the disgraceful condition on the Bowery where three-times-daily police pick-ups of drunks seems like a continuous excursion.

Commissioner of Hospitals Edward M. Bernecker said Bellevue Hospital had done yeoman work in caring for the Bowery drunkards.

"We take them, clean them up, sober them up, turn them loose and in two days they are back again from the Bowery," the commissioner said.

The County Fair

By A German Teacher of Agriculture, Murray State College

The County Fair is an institution that is almost as old as organized society. It has served as a means of bringing together the people of the community on a common interest basis where they can see the results of their handiwork and compare results. It is one of the best means of education that society has employed. The English have used the county fair and local shows as a means to establish in the minds of the public the type and characteristics of the livestock that best served the interest and needs of the breeders. Through the local show the Bates type of Southern cow was firmly established in the minds of the populace. This type of short-horn cow is still popular and is admired by the breeders of the present day. It has been through the medium of the local English show that typical and symmetrical Jersey cows have been developed. Through the show we see the good points of the animals of different breeds have been exchanged and so that the desirable characteristics of the individual animals have been combined through selective breeding.

There is evidence of an old fair ground in the south end of Murray. While the fairs were held there, the interest in the county fair has waned in recent years. The need for these local shows or fairs is just as great as it was in the past, especially in connection with livestock improvement. Commercial farming and modern means of communication have lessened the interest in the county fair as a social event but as a means of disseminating information on the best type of livestock and farm products, the county fair still holds a place of importance.

Through the Murray, a splendid organization that has the interest of the county fair at heart and plans are being worked out to hold a county fair again this summer. The lack of transportation facilities and the shortage of money caused the interruption of the county fair during the war. Last year the Calloway County Fair was resumed with very satisfactory results, especially in the showing of livestock.

It is evident that there is considerable interest in the fair by the community, especially as this is true with the merchants and business men of Murray and Calloway county. To have the best results from the showing of farm and home products there should be a very keen interest on the part of the producers of these products. It is through this interest that the best of the varieties of farm crops, the best of the breeds of poultry and livestock, and the best of the products of the farm and home are put on display and the improvement in these products is passed on and put into production throughout the county.

We urge all farm people to begin now to plan to exhibit their products at the County Fair which will be held in Murray this summer.

Buchanan News

Just wonder if everyone is enjoying the Ledger and Times as much more since it has changed hands as my family at Hickman.

I think a good sermon by some good preacher like Bro. J. H. Thompson, Bro. Paschall, or Bro. Wilson would be an awfully good addition to the paper.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudie Allen and children, Mrs. Day and children, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Allen and children.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. W. Clayton and sons spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Lamb.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Adair of Louisville, Ky. have visiting in parents Mr. and Mrs. Cull Adair.

Rev. Williams and Mrs. Williams of Paris were visitors of the Mt. Sinai Baptist church Sunday. Rev. Williams is this state's missionary.

Blood River

News is plentiful for a daily chat but borrowed time weekly. More rain, more fishing water, but when it hailed the past week guess fish dived to the bottom. Those arriving from Detroit Saturday for a two weeks vacation were Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. James Wisheart and

Mr. and Mrs. Kellie Wisheart. Mrs. Monnie Mitchell received a letter from her son, Louis Mitchell, insisting that his mother come to Detroit the 4th. He and one of her very nice sons-in-law, Elmer Rodriguez, plead that she come to Detroit and bid Kentucky adieu and all offer her gold but she has silver at home. Street car lines near a new Detroit's bed hinders from snoring.

Mrs. Ann Maxley of Ypsilanti, Mich., is visiting relatives in Kentucky. Miss Clematine Wilson of Paris is visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Green this week. Those that have not exchanged their straw beds for spring mattresses, the wheat has been harvested throughout this section and time to launder and fill the bed with new. Those visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clay McClure the past Sunday included Mrs. Ann Maxley of Ypsilanti, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Lee Freeland of Memphis, Tenn., Mr. and Mrs. Iry Morgan of Hazel, Mr. and Mrs. Rob Moody and family of near Centerville bridge, Mr. and Mrs. John Freeland and sons, James and George Freeland, of near the state line.

So many Macedonia peddlers that maybe they'll get an egg apiece. Motorists, drive very carefully the Fourth. A small tot may wander out into the traffic. A few years past the small son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rodriguez of Detroit wandered into the streets and its mother heard emergency conking of ears and ran to the door to find that it was her baby standing in a four-way street holding up the traffic in every direction and was unconcerned of the danger signals. An ambulance passed with Mrs. Charles Ruffell and infant from a Murray hospital a few days past.

They reside near Alvie Grubbs.
